THE GENEROUS
KIND!

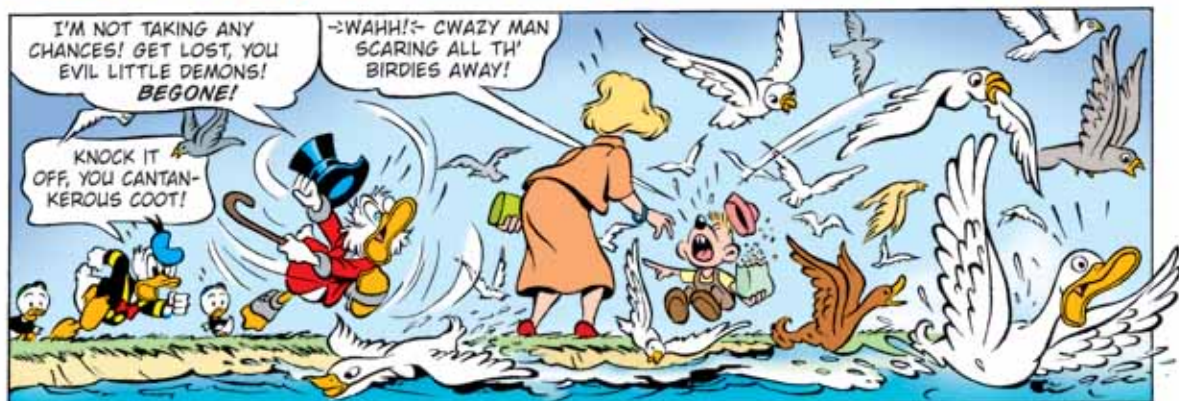

-WAK!-

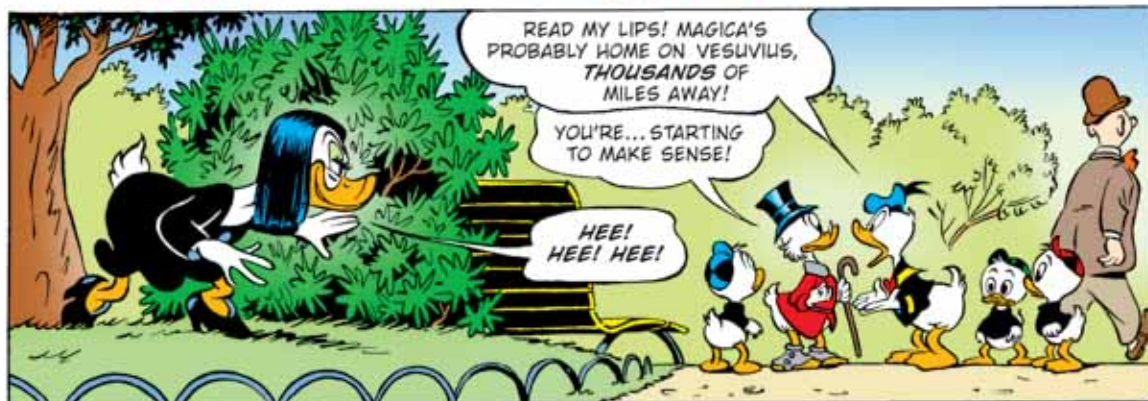

HEY!

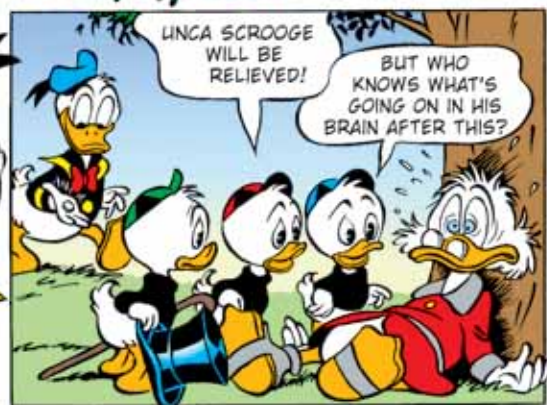

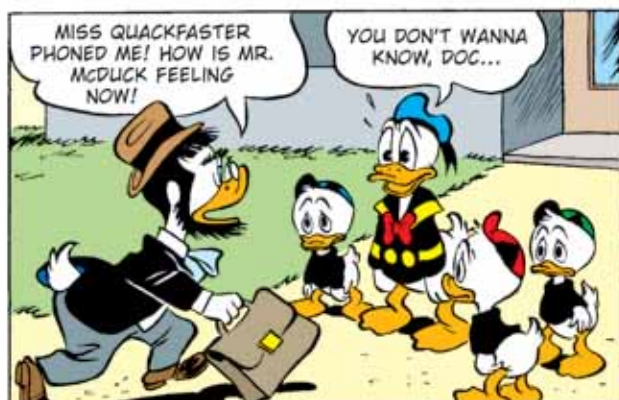

In keeping with our unofficial "tradition" of reprinting Scrooge stories from late in Carl Barks' career in this title, we've finally come around this issue to one of my favorites, "Isle of Golden Geese." I bought this comic off the racks when it originally appeared in 1963 and I can clearly remember remarking to myself about the complexity and the quality of the story. Many Barks enthusiasts can pinpoint a specific time at which they became aware that there was someone out there producing Duck stories that were a cut above everything else, and for me this adventure was it. From that point on I started looking for "the good stories." Unfortunately, at that time, there weren't many more to come.

As is typical, I learned several years later, after becoming involved in the burgeoning field of comics fandom, that the "good artist" was Carl Barks. And I have been fortunate enough to be involved with him and his work for most of my career.

—John Clark
